5. REPUBLIC DAY

Objective of Republic Day

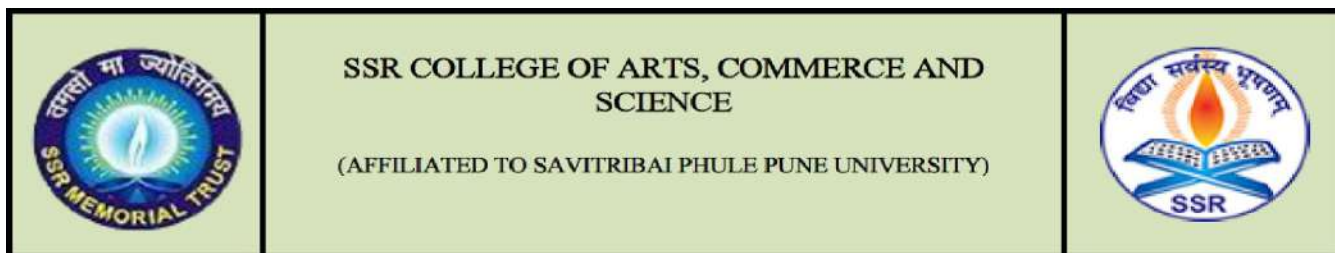

While for some countries, republic day is the moment the government in its current form was founded, others commemorate it as the day on which a significant change took place in its governance. "The Resolution states that it is our firm and solemn resolve to have a sovereign Indian republic. You will well understand that a free India can be nothing but a republic," announced Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru on 13th December 1946, as he sketched out the aims and objectives of the Constitution that he and his listeners were about to put together in the next three years. With 395 articles and 12 schedules, the Indian Constitution is often believed to be the longest of its kind in the world. Coming into effect on 26th January 1950, the Constitution of India tied together with the hitherto watery borders of the country and gave birth to the "sovereign democratic republic" that we celebrate each year most magnificently.
